COUP STIRS HOMESTEAD

RASCHE INSPECTS OLD GLORY

"A beautiful plane," was the comment of Fraulein Thea Rasche, German aviatrix, regarding "Old Glory," the William Randolph Hearst New York-to-Rome monoplane, when she met Lloyd W. Bertaud, one of the pilots. They were photographed while discussing the forthcoming flight.

CLUE FOUND TO MISSING WOMAN

Mrs. Samuel Snell, 44, of Philadelphia, missing wife of a wealthy wholesale produce merchant, was seen last night in McKeesport, according to a man who called the Pittsburgh Missing Persons Bureau this morning. The man did not reveal his identity.

Police and city detectives were asked a few days ago by a son of the missing woman, Samuel Snell, Jr., to aid in a search for her. He said she had drawn $1,000 from a bank before her disappearance.

Annexation Talk Stirs Uproar

Jeers and hisses composed the reception accorded by Penn township residents to four city officials who attempted to preach annexation of Penn township to Pittsburgh at a meeting last night in Thaddeus Stevens School, Penn township. The disorder continued throughout the three-hour session.

When the speakers, Charles P. Lang, special assistant city solicitor; Magistrate A. D. Brandon, of Morals Court; L. M. Stephens and J. M. Henry, had completed their remarks and the boos had subsided, the meeting chairman, W. C. Waiters, apologized for the conduct of the assemblage.

BAR'S VOTE ON JUDGES ASSAILED

Referring to the bar association's methods in the election of judges as "something like loaded dice," William G. Hohmann, North Side independent, protested against attorneys "trying to use their profession to bolster up a slate politically" in an address before the Tyler Club of the North Side, last night.

Hohmann raised objection to the system of placing the "slate" candidates at the head of the list while all other candidates were placed alphabetically.

Cavanaugh Again in Seat

Homestead political circles seethed with excitement today as rival leaders prepared to fight the coup by Edward Klein, president of borough council and a co-worker and supporter of Burgess John Cavanaugh.

Declaring that "Conditions in the boroughs are such that another advent of the state militia can be expected momentarily," Klein last night almost disrupted a borough council meeting by removing all power from the hands of the council's police committee and transferring it directly to Burgess Cavanaugh.

No sooner had he made this announcement, which came while a motion to adjourn the theretofore quiet, routine meeting, than a motion was rushed through summarily discharging John "Cuppie" Jenkins, night ordinance officer of the borough and a former police captain of its night force.

Jenkins has been drawing the fire of the Cavanaugh administration for some time.

Ross J. Thomas, one of the principal opponents of the Cavanaugh administration, is expected to lead a fight to have Klein's action set aside.

SLOT MACHINE CACHE FOUND

Thorough investigation was being made today by state police of records seized last night when they raided a slot machine storehouse at 2920 Fifth avenue, and confiscated 26 gambling devices in an effort to determine the scope of the establishment's activities, which are believed to have extended over several states.

Fifteen machines, crated for consignment to Trenton, were removed from an automobile truck in front of the building and the driver, Samuel T. Athers, of Greensburg, was arrested.

Bachelors Rebel But Tie Cutters Bring In Physician

DUBOIS, Wyo., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—This dude and cattle town in the heart of the waning West and 85 miles from a railroad has at last been successful in its quest for a physician. Dr. E. B. Danerer has put out his shingle upstairs over the pool hall.

Five months ago a plan was launched to assess all families and bachelors to insure the doctor earning a living wage, for this is a healthy country. The bachelors rebelled but the tie cutters at Dunoir, 110 miles from a railroad, agreed to chip in and the deal was closed. The doctor will serve the two towns.

WOMAN FAINTS WHILE DRIVING AUTO; KILLED

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—A woman was killed yesterday because she fainted at the wheel of her automobile. She was Mrs. Charles F. A. Arnold, of Des Plaines, Ill., near here. Three passengers with her were injured. Mrs. Arnold's faint lost her the control of the car, and it overturned. The three injured are Mrs. Emma Arnold, her sister-in-law, and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Knodt, all of Chicago.

"SOFT" FOR WAR HORSES

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—The overworked cavalry horse is to get a little pleasure out of the next war if the army can arrange it. Orders have been received here for experiments to establish the feasibility of moving cavalry units, including horses, across country on motor trucks. The next war may see American motor trucks bearing the equivalent of the French "Hommes 40 Chevaux 8."

FIVE CITIES ARE TERRORIZED BY BOMB EXPLOSIONS

As bombs exploded in five cities today a guard of war-time strength was thrown about President Coolidge, a roundup of all known reds in Pittsburgh was ordered, and Federal and city authorities conferred on extraordinary precautions. Police forces of many cities were mobilized. In Baltimore the mayor's home was bombed. In New York double explosions wrecked two subway stations, injuring a score. A Philadelphia church was dynamited, and in Chicago a war veteran was a bomb victim. Two bombings occurred in the Argentine, one damaging a Ford agency.

Police Here Mobilize

Federal, city and county authorities this morning started a mobilization of all police authorities to prevent bombing outrages here by Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers.

John D. Meyer, United States district attorney, requested Police Superintendent Peter P. Walsh to guard public buildings and officials, and the word has gone out to all police agencies to arrest known radicals.

Supt. Walsh immediately summoned all police inspectors to his office to plan emergency measures to thwart bombers.

One hundred patrolmen today will be assigned to guard all public buildings, the home of Mayor Charles H. Kline and other public officials.

The City-County Building, Federal buildings and the larger buildings in the city will be patroled.

Precautions For Coolidge

RAPID CITY, S. D., Aug. 6.—The President of the United States today was surrounded by a guard as heavy as that which protected the Chief Executive during the war, after reports of radical violence protesting against the electrocution of Sacco and Vanzetti.

When report was received from New York that subways had been bombed, presumably

An early morning fire forced John McGowan, his wife and their seven children to flee from their home at 3523 Penn avenue. Damage was estimated at $500.

TROOPERS SENT TO AVELLA

State troopers were sent to Avella, Pa., Saturday at the request of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation.

"There is no trouble at our No. 9 mine, which is being operated nonunion," said George W. Freeman, assistant to the vice president of the company.

"We just wanted to be prepared and requested the sheriff to assist us. He communicated with Maj. Lynn G. Adams, who directed Capt. J. C. Nauk, of Troop P of Butler, to establish a sub-station at Avella, which has been done by the sending of three men and three orderlies to that place. Headquarters have been opened at the Wabash Hotel."

The Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation started non-union operations several months ago.

DRIED FRUIT SEIZED BECAUSE OF ARSENIC

Discovering that arsenic had been used in the process of evaporating fruits shipped here, federal pure food officials today procured an order from the United States District Court for the seizure of 450 bags of dried apples in a shipment in the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad yards.

A twenty-page magazine section, twelve-page comic section and a section entirely new to Pittsburgh, known as the March of Events Section, will be among the myriad of splendid features. NEW KENSINGTON MEN DENOUNCE COAL POLICE

Business men of New Kensington and Arnold have appealed to Gov. John S. Fisher to restore law and order here among coal and iron policemen guarding coal properties operating nonunion.

They have also requested him to join with Gov. Donahey, of Ohio, and other governors in the central competitive coal field, to help bring about a settlement of the wage differences between the coal companies and the strikers. The appeal was decided at a public gathering and telegraphed to the Governor.

The resolutions allege:

"Workmen are being arrested on trumped-up charges; young girls are being abducted and assaulted; medical aid is being denied injured children and others; certain coal company heads are offering prize sums of money for beating of innocent workmen; trouble may follow if these assaults are continued; it is the duty of the representative citizenry to assume the lead and bring an end to this barbarous warfare."

OTHER OF THREE SLAIN IN NEW YORK SUBWAY

GIRL FINDS MYSTERY VICTIM'S BODY

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—The curiosity of one lone woman among thousands who hurried through the subway station at City Hall revealed to police one of the strangest murder mysteries in years.

Deep under the earth, the death-dealing shots hushed by the rattle of passing subway trains and the bustle of hurrying throngs, a mother of three was shot to death under circumstances which have completely mystified police.

Miss Sarah Lipschitz, 18, an English teacher to Russian immigrants, had stopped in the woman's washroom of the station when she observed the body. She notified a policeman.

After considerable investigation, police identified the woman as Mrs. Emma Weigand, 39, a milliner, who resided in the Bronx with her mother, Mrs. Frieda Ables.

At first it was thought a case of suicide, but no pistol was found and further investigation showed the woman had been slain in one part of the washroom and her body carried to another part.

lightful cartoons. The first of a great series of articles, dealing with American heroes of the World War, will appear in the section. It is from the pen of Col. Theodore Roosevelt, himself a wounded veteran of the World War. The first of the heroic exploits to be told in detail will be those of Michael Ellis of the Twenty-eighth Infantry, who, single-handed, captured 60 prisoners and 10 guns.

Ninety per cent of Washington officialdom is soft-pedaling in response to anti-Volstead public opinion, declares Maj. Walton A. Green, formerly United States prohibition investigator under Gen. Andrews, in an article which will appear in the March of Events Section. Maj. Green tells in detail why enforcement, in his opinion, "prohibition is going to pieces throughout the United States." Kathleen Norris, famous woman writer, contributes an article in which she advises wives not to permit jealous husbands to blind them. This article is exceedingly enlightening and presents some intensely interesting viewpoints on a very popular question.

Among the humorists will be Will Rogers, O. O. McIntyre, J. P. Medbury, Roy K. Moulton, Lloyd Mayer, Elsie Robinson and Don Herold. A page of snappy cartoons by J. W. McGurk will also be an interesting feature.

All the news of the day and sports, the stage and screen, society, in fact, all events of interest will be thoroughly covered.

KENTUCKY VOTING TODAY

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Fifty-seven candidates for Democratic or Republican nomination for nine state offices are before the voters of the state today. The primary election will see the elimination of all except seventeen of them. The eighteenth, W. C. Bell, Democratic candidate for superintendent of public instruction, was without a contest. The state-wide offices to be filled are governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, attorney general, auditor, treasurer, superintendent of public instruction and clerk of court of appeals.

GAY PARIS HEARS ECHO -:- OF SACCO-VANZETTI CASE

Ten thousand Parisians gathered at the Cirque de Paris to protest against the sentences of death imposed on Sacco and Vanzetti, which Gov. Alvan T. Fuller found to be just penalties. Many prominent social and radical leaders addressed the crowd which included Frenchmen and aliens from all quarters of the capital and all walks of life. Boulevardier rubbed shoulders with apache and street gamin as a cross section of the Parisian populace voiced its faith in the innocence of the condemned radicals. Mme. Severine, 77, for many years a Socialist leader and educator, came out of retirement to act as chairman of the gathering.

2,500 MINERS ON UNION SCALE

Approximately 2,500 men are producing coal in the Pittsburgh district in accordance with the Jacksonville scale, President P. T. Fagan, of District No. 5, United Mine Workers of America, said today. When the suspension in the central competitive field began, April 1, Fagan said, many small operators renewed the pact, and that these have since added to rolls, principally to meet an increased domestic demand. Fagan says that in Indiana about 50 per cent of the usual tonnage is now being turned out by union men.

Begin Boom to Name Hoover

RIDGWAY, Pa., Aug. 6.—Maj. William A. Scully, director of the Foreign Language Bureau of the Republican National Commitee during the last presidential campaign, today named Herbert Hoover as the logical Republican candidate in 1928.

Scully, now at his summer home, "Buena Vista," near here, said, however, that he believes most of the Republican leaders would have liked to see President Coolidge nominated.

I believe, said Scully, that those who intended to support Coolidge for the nomination will throw their support to Hoover. And my understanding of the situation is that the President would like to see this done. Hoover is the strongest man in the Cabinet. He has been the one man of the executive family on whom the President has leaned heavily and often.

Bomb Starts Fire in Home

BALTIMORE, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—An attempt was made to blow up the home of Mayor William F. Broening, in Northwest Baltimore by a bomb this morning.. The house was set on fire, and firemen found another bomb inside the dwelling.

The terrific explosion shook the entire section. Police advanced no theory for the cause of the outrage.

No one was injured. The house was slightly damaged by the fire.

Mayor Broening is absent from the city. His wife, son and daughter, the remaining members of the family, were in the house.

The bomb exploded under the back porch, which was demolished.

LOCAL MAN IS STRONG IN LEGION ELECTION

YORK, Pa., Aug. 6.—Faced with the prospect of one of the closest fights for leadership in its history, the Pennsylvania Department of the American Legion today began selecting a commander from a field of six candidates nominated late yesterday.

As hotly contested was the choice of a convention city for 1928.

The three candidates strongest in pledged votes were E. E. Hollenback, of Philadelphia; Charles G. Lane, Jr., of Pittsburgh, and Frank Schoble, Jr., of Jenkintown. The other three are D. S. Zimmerman, of Shamokin; J. H. Thompson, of Upper Darby, and Dr. Robert Sagerson, of Johnstown.

The convention committee has decided to recommend to the delegates that the 1928 convention be held at Uniontown, it was learned as the sessions opened. There is every indication that the Western Pennsylvania city will entertain the legionnaires next year.

Subways Hit In New York

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—(A P.)—The entire New York police department of approximately 14,000 men was mobilized at full strength today by Police Commissioner Warren and a guard was thrown around all public buildings, subway and elevated stations.

Specific places, in addition to railroad terminals and public centers, ordered guarded by the commissioner were: City Hall, Court House, Municipal Building, the Stock Exchange, banks, public library and Metropolitan Museum.

This action was taken as a result of the double explosion in the subways shortly before midnight which injured a score of persons, wrecked two stations and shattered store fronts over a wide area.

The bombs exploded within 10 minutes of each other in the Twenty-eight street stations of the Interborough Rapid Transit and the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit lines.

The explosions occurred in midtown Manhattan during the after-theater rush hour. The first was at 11:15 p. m., in the lavatory of the B. M. T. station at Twenty-eighth and Broadway. The second, at 11:26 p. m., was at the southern end of the I. R. T. station at Twenty-eighth street and Fourth avenue.

Fourteen persons were taken to the hospitals. All but two returned to their homes after treatments.

The police believed the bombs had been placed in protest against the death sentence pronounced on Nicola Sacco and Bartholomeo Vanzetti, who are to be executed August 10.

Philadelphia Church Blast

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 6.—The police here today sought Sacco and Vanzetti sympathizers in the belief they were responsible for the bombing this morning of the Emanuel Presbyterian Church, West Philadelphia. The charge wrecked the building and shook houses within a radius of a mile. Windows in more than 100 apartments were shattered and sleepers jolted from their beds.

The Rev. Edward S. Bowman, pastor of the church, recently denounced the two radicals, the police said.

Chicago War Vet Injured

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—One man was injured and scores shaken here today when a black powder bomb exploded in a soft drink shop.

HOME-MADE BLIMP RUNS AWAY

Following a zig-zag course, a runaway home-made blimp, equipped with a motorcycle engine that went dead 2,000 feet up, Friday broke away from its mooring rope at Secaucus, N. J. sailed over New York City and was brought to earth when its passenger, A. A. Hensler, pulled the rip cord over Flushing, L. I. When the rip cord was pulled, the gas poured out of the envelope, causing it to sag and drop swiftly to earth, just as this photo was taken.

It is cool again over Alberta and Saskatchewan, temperatures generally below 50 degrees, and at many places low in the forties. There was also a change to cooler in Montana and North Dakota. Elsewhere the temperature changes were slight.

Hollywood Film Actress Shoots Down Her Husband

MOVIE LIFE BREAKSUP HAPPY HOME

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—The thrills of Russian intrigues and the terrors of Bolshevik prisons had their anticlimax here today in the drabness of the city jail. Mrs. Irene Presniakoff, 26, known on the screen as Irene Preston, was held under a charge of assault with a deadly weapon while her husband, Logar Presniakoff, 35, also of the films and former Russian Army lieutenant, nursed a superficial bullet wound in the shoulder, inflicted by his wife.

The police reported that the young Russian woman, who said she was the daughter of the one-time court surgeon to the Czar, declared their work in motion pictures had broken up their home. She said they separated a year ago, and she was endeavoring to effect a reconciliation.

"He called me a woman of the streets; then I shot him," she said.

"She telephoned me to come to see her, and then she shot me," he said.

When the police arrived at the woman's apartment she was treating her husband's wound.

For the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and the Bureau of Recreation of the city are co-operating in providing this opportunity. When the competition is over, there will be playground champions, district champions, a champion of Greater Pittsburgh, and, in Memphis, Tenn., October 8, a national boy airplane champ will be made. There are prizes for all the winners.

HOLD-UP MAN KILLED

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—David Nyhan, former gangster and beer runner, paid with his life yesterday for an attempted holdup in the saloon of James "Motorboat" Welsh, here. He was shot and fatally wounded by a ski who was present in plain clothes. The policeman and the others were lined up against the wall at the order to "stick 'em up," given by Nyhan upon his entrance into the saloon. While Nyhan was "frisking" the victims, the policeman slipped out through a back door, ran around in front, and fired.

POSTMASTER IS KILLED TRYING TO SAVE MAIL

BURKE, Va., Aug. 6.—Trapped in a vain attempt to rescue valuable mail from a burning building that housed the postoffice here, J. J. Sangster, postmaster, was burned to death. Sangster's body was found under a sack of feed which had fallen from an upper story.

MAILMAN ROYAL GUEST

OSHWA, Ont., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—W. O. Brown, local letter carrier yesterday received a special invitation to attend the garden party to the Prince of Wales at Toronto. Thirty years ago Brown, then attached to a Tower Guard in London, prevented the young prince from stepping in front of a runaway horse.

STORMS DELAY LEVINE'S HOP

PARIS, Aug. 6.—(International News Service Wire.)—The stormy weather off the French coast today caused a postponement of the hop-off of Charles A. Levine, the American transatlantic flyer and his pilot, Maurice Drouhin, in the Fokker monoplane Columbia on the first non-stop westward flight over the ocean.

Levine said he hoped to get away Sunday morning. Levine was anxious to start at 6 o'clock this morning. His reports on weather conditions from England and America were favorable, but Drouhin insisted upon postponing the departure because of a report he had received of bad weather off the French coast.

If weather conditions become favorable and remain so it is likely that four airplanes will leave Europe within the next week.

QUITS RACE OUT OF 'CHIVALRY'

CLARKSDALE, Miss., Aug. 6.—(AP.)—"No true Southern gentleman would try to gain at the expense of a lady."

With these words Capt. T. S. Aderholt of Friar's Point, 85-year-old Confederate veteran, bowed himself out of a run-off primary with Mrs. Pauline Alston Clark for a place in the Legislature.

Capt. Aderholdt, who was a member of the last Legislature, ran second to Mrs. Clark in Tuesday's Democratic primary, which is equivalent to election, but neither received the necessary majority in a three-cornered race. His gallantry gives the seat to Mrs. Clark.

QUEEN HETEP-HERES HUNT IS FRUITLESS

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Queen Hetep-Heres is still missing. A report received from Dr. George A. Reisner, confirms previous dispatches that a coffin identified as that of Queen Hetep-Heres, mother of Cheops, famous ruler of Egypt more than 3,000 years ago, has been opened by members of the Egyptian expedition, sponsored by Harvard University and the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, and found empty. The party has been seeking the body of the queen over two years.

JAZZING THE AIR

[illegible] KAHN

Roger Wolfe Kahn, son of Otto Kahn, youthful musical impressario and orchestra leader, is shown in a JN training plane with which he made his first "solo" flight at Curtiss Field, Long Island. This was his first flight after the completion of a course in flying, his latest hobby, at the field.

SCREEN NEWS and VIEWS STAGE

Stage Fighter of "Is Zat So" To Show His Skill As Boxer In Picture About Prize Ring

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 6.—Robert Armstrong, the prize fighter of the far-famed stage production, "Is Zat So," will do his stuff in the movies. Curious how the tendency these days seems to favor prize fight pictures. Maybe it is because Jack Dempsey lives here in Hollywood. Mr. Armstrong will play one pugilistic role and Charles Delaney will have the other in "The Main Event," a William K. Howard production, loudly mentioned as an important De Mille prize package offering this coming year.

This young Delaney is coming rapidly to the front. He played his first important role in "Frisco Sally Levy" and since that time he has been regarded as promising screen material.

"The Main Event" is based on a story by Paul Allison. Hans Gliese, who came here to Hollywood from Germany with F. W. Murnau to be his art director, is writing the adaptation. I don't know what art directors has to do with prize fighting, but Mr. Gliese had better know his technique or he will have the fight fans of the country on his neck.

Vera Reynolds, I almost forgot to say, furnishes the feminine touch.

Great things are expected of Mary Duncan in the movies. Not because Miss Duncan has become very popular socially in Hollywood film circles but because her work as Poppy on the stage in "The Shanghai Gesture" is regarded as an unusual piece of acting. Miss Duncan's chance to emote before the camera as a leading lady came sooner than she or anyone else expected. She has been signed to the role of Victor MacLaglen's leading woman in "The Black Gang." This is a crook story by Laura Hasse and Daniel Tomlinson and, according to the Fox company, it is full of unexpected thrills and situations.

RATTLESNAKE HUNTS THRILL FILM PLAYERS

Hunting sidewinders, a variety of rattlesnake so called because they travel and strike sideways, was the sport of Ronald Colman, Noah Beery, Neil Hamilton and scores of other screen players during the three months they spent on the Arizona desert while filming "Beau Geste," which remains in the Stanley-Davis-Clark Grand next week.

Waring's Pennsylvanians will be seen and heard on the Vitaphone in the Stanley-Davis-Clark Olympic next week. On the screen will be Adolphe Menjou's new vehicle, "Service for Ladies." Kathryn Carver is the star's new leading woman. Harry D'Arrast directed.

Daughters of Fashion Win Film Success As Cowgirls

Metropolitan boarding schools maintained for the daughters of the well-to-do continue to send their quota of hard-riding Western heroines to the screen.

Ann Sheridan, who has been signed as leading woman for Bob Steele in Westerns, was educated in exclusive girls' schools in New York City and learned to ride horses on the bridle-paths of Central Park. Her real name is Gloria Haller. Although she agrees the time she spent cantering through the well known park was well invested, inasmuch as her riding ability has helped her in films, it is her ambition to star some day in horseless pictures.

The Hearst Newspaper Radio Kids on the Vitaphone, Pathe News and Aesop Fables complete the bill.

The final performance of "Applesauce" will be given by the George Sharp Production Stock Company today. Monday night the company will present "If I Was Rich," with Anne Forrest and Herbert Clark.

Kharum, the Persian pianist, is booked for appearance the week of August 8 at the cool Davis Theater, heading a distinctive Keith-Albee vaudeville bill. Lewis Stone and Anna Q. Nilsson in "Lonesome Ladies," will be the screen comedy feature, with news and short subject comedy to complete the bill.

James Cruze's Paramount picture, "Old Ironsides," from the story of Laurence Stallings, will have its premiere in the Nixon Theater Monday evening.

There will be dancing tonight on Kennywood's ballroom floor, with the music furnished by Bob McGowan's Orchestra. Commencing Monday, August 8, the dance devotees will dance to music furnished by Art Giles' orchestra. Cliff Curran, daredevil, will be a feature next week.

Sunday concerts and dancing every evening during the week, coupled with numerous amusement features, comprise the program at West View Park next week. The two concerts Sunday will be given by Nirella's Band and an interesting program of popular and classical numbers have been arranged. Dancers in the park will hear the Commodore Orchestra next week.

Movie "Bad Girl" -:- Look Who's Here! -:- Sea Tale Heroine

Phyllis Haver, who has been alternatively playing good and bad women with gratifying success, admits frankly that she prefers being wicked on the screen.

Yep, That's Jackie—we mean Jackie Coogan of course. Even though you may think it is Tom Mix, we assure you it is Jackie. His first roll under his new movie contract is in "The Bugle Call." Do you wonder if that's a harness store horse? We do, to.

Esther Ralston, popular screen actress, has the feminine lead in "Old Ironsides," a picture that will bring the old frigate Constitution to the screen.

Screen to Offer New Version of Race Track Drama

With a cast that will include not only notable screen players, but also some famous race horses, John M. Stahl has started production on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer filmization of "In Old Kentucky," the celebrated racing melodrama of the stage and screen.

The newest version of this story of horse racing in Kentucky will include in it some spectacular racing details, in which Whiskery will be seen winning the last Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs. These scenes were taken in Kentucky during the last derby specially for the picture.

James Murray, who recently finished the leading male role in King Vidor's "The Crowd," will play the hero, and Edward Martindale will be seen in the role of a Kentucky colonel of the old school. Jockeys who will appear in the picture include Albert Johnson, Earle Sande, Earl Pool and others.

MONTE BLUE AND WIFE WILL MAKE MOTOR TOUR

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 6.—The strong right arm of Monte Blue's that has been in a sling ever since he got hurt while making his prize fight picture, is out of the sling now. Monte is glad because he is taking Mrs. Blue on a three weeks' trip to Seattle and Yosemite Valley.

ALICE DAY'S SISTER FORMER EXTRA GIRL

Marceline Day, who comes to Loew's Aldine next week in "Captain Salvation," screen version of the novel, is a sister of the well-known actress, Alice Day. Born in Colorado Springs, Col., she received her education in Los Angeles. She did not enter pictures until some time after her sister, Alice, had attained considerable screen fame. Her first work was that of an extra, from which she graduated to small parts and then leading roles. Her first outstanding work was in "The Barrier." Other successes include "The Beloved Rogue," with John Barrymore, and "The Boy Friend."

Wallace Reid's Widow Appears in Person With New Film

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 6.—So much has been said for and "agin" personal appearances, that most people are neutral where they are concerned. Mrs. Wallace Reid believes firmly in them as exploitation for movies. She did very well with her dope picture by talking against the drug habit simultaneously with the showing of her films. Her second picture has to do with broken laws and she also talks on the danger of not staying within the law. This last tour is a purely personal appearance, with no crusade. She opens in Spokane, Seattle and Portland, with an engagement in each city.

College Film May Part Rod La Rocque and Vilma Banky

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 6.—Rod La Rocque may have to leave his bride, Vilma Banky, for a few weeks. It's a shame to print this when the honeymooners are at Del Monte and may read the paper, but "Hold 'Em Yale," by Owen Davis, has been selected as Rod's next picture. Cecil De Mille, who believes in realism, has decided that the scenes of Yale must be taken in New Haven. In that event, Rod will have to go East. Perhaps Vilma won't mind having her bridegroom away, since she begins work immediately on "Leatherface" opposite Ronald Colman. Rod and Vilma are expected back next week, although they admit at the Goldwyn and the De Mille Studio they have had no definite promise.

DEATH ROLL

Samuel C. Chessman.

Samuel C. Chessman, 53, of 1247 Palo Alto street, died yesterday in the Allegheny General Hospital. Jerry W. Gumbert, of Verona, died Wednesday in the United States Marine Hospital. He was born in old Allegheny, May 15, 1869, and had resided in Verona 33 years. For many years he was employed by the Iron City Sand Co., but at the time of his death was captain of the steamboat J. H. McCrady, of the Rodgers Sand Co. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Jennie Hawk Gumbert; one son, Howard Gumbert, of Oakmont; four daughters, Mrs. William Bright, of Verona; Mrs. John Fetters, of Wilkinsburg, and Miss Geraldine and Miss Rachel Gumbert, and three grandchildren.

She was married at Bridgeville in 1923. She had lived in California several years. Besides her parents and husband she leaves two children, Beth Nanette Du Shane and Raymond M. Du Shane, Jr. Her mother, who was visiting her at the time of her death, is accompanying the body here.

STOCK COMPANY STAR HAS BRIEF VACATION

This week Anne Forrest, popular star of the George Sharp Production Stock Company, who will appear in "If I Was Rich" in the Pitt Theater next week, took a much needed rest after playing for 11 consecutive weeks. Miss Forrest enjoys mingling with the crowd in front of the theater and gets a great "kick" out of listening to people commenting on the play.

"It's great fun to watch people buy tickets," says Miss Forrest. "Most of them buy quickly and hurry on their way, but occasionally you will get an odd customer."

CONRAD NAGEL TO PLAY LEAD IN CHANEY PICTURE

Conrad Nagel has been added to the cast of Lon Chaney's next vehicle, "The Hypnotist," a mystery story, an original by Tod Browning, which the director will make in the near future. Waldemar Young did the scenario. Edna Tichenor, who played the "Spider Woman" in "The Show," also has been added to the cast of "The Hypnotist," to play a strange mystery figure. Polly Moran will be seen in an important role.

LOUISE FAZENDA IS CAST IN WILL ROGERS' COMEDY

Louise Fazenda will be Will Rogers' leading lady in "A Texas Steer" and Ann Rork will have the role of Bossy, daughter of the Texas cattleman. Miss Fazenda is under contract to Warner Brothers, and was loaned to Sam Rork. On completion of her work with Will Rogers, she will return to Warners to continue her contract. The rest of the cast will be selected within 10 days.

"BETTY" By FAITH BALDWIN

The Fascinating Love Story of a Girl of the Present Day

Betty Gets a Job With An Advertising Agency and Makes New Friends and proceeded at once to the question of salaries.

It was true enough what Lorrimer had said. She would start in with the advertising firm at eight dollars more a week than she had been getting with the agency.

It was arranged that she would come to work on the following Monday and she left the office feeling very happy and hopeful indeed. She stopped just long enough to drink a soda water fountain glass of malted milk and eat a sandwich and telephone the good news home to her mother on the way back to work.

Once back in the office she consulted Mrs. Sampson. The firm had been good to her and she regretted that she must leave in what appeared to her a sudden and ungracious manner. But she told Mrs. Sampson the circumstances and the older woman nodded. She knew a good deal of Betty's troubles herself and she in no wise blamed her for leaving.

"It's all right," she replied pleasantly, "we will all be sorry to lose you—we've liked you. I hope you've liked us. But we couldn't stand in your way. You are quite right—there is no real future for you here and you deserve a good one. If you aren't happy in the new position I can pretty safely promise you a place if ever you want to come back to us."

On the following Monday after a prolonged farewell to her friends at the agency Betty started in in the new office. She had not seen Bob since the night they had quarreled. But he had telephoned twice during the days and talked to her mother while she had been at work. It was not that his conversation with Mrs. Warren had amounted to anything important. It was simply his way of letting Betty know that he was on the job so to speak, and intended to keep his word about "sticking around."

Mrs. Warren repeated the gist of his talks to Betty and Betty shrugged.

"Well, just as long as he doesn't bother me," she said.

"Have you two children quarreled again?" asked her mother.

"For good this time," answered Betty, steeling her heart.

But Mrs. Warren only laughed.

"I won't believe it. He seems to feel differently," she answered, "and it takes two to make a quarrel," she added comfortably.

"Where have I heard that before?" thought Betty in exasperation as she fled from the room pursued by her mother's amused laughter.

She herself had called Lorrimer's studio and had reached him on the phone. She asked him if he had had a pleasant trip—wherever it was that he'd gone. For the moment he seemed amazed, as well he might have been, for he had forgotten that he'd told her he was going out of town. But he soon recovered his wits and memory and seemed sincerely delighted when she told him that thanks to him she had "landed" the position with Weston & Sterns.

"You'll let me see you?" he begged. "How about lunch—say Wednesday—to celebrate your job?"

Betty hesitated. And then—accepted.

So the new job soon became an old story to her and luncheons with Lorrimer another. Now and then Bob came, always on a Sunday afternoon when the family was together, not risking a rebuff by coming in the evening and sat stiffly around refusing to be frozen out by either Betty or Virginia and receiving a great deal of attention from Helen and Mrs. Warren to make up for the attitude of the others. The dreamy Gladys, as usual, was neutral simply because she never took in half that went on about her, being much too preoccupied with herself and her own ambitions.

In the new office Betty had made a friend of Harry Martin, the young man of whom Lorrimer had spoken. She liked him from the very first day they met. He was a slim, gray-eyed, blond young fellow with eager, charming ways and a delightful manner. He was of Lorrimer's class, socially, only with perhaps more family and a great deal less money. Very little money, in fact. But he was well paid in the advertising agency as he was their best and livest young copy writer. There was no doubt in anyone's mind but that as soon as he brought in a little more business to the firm he would be in line for a partnership.

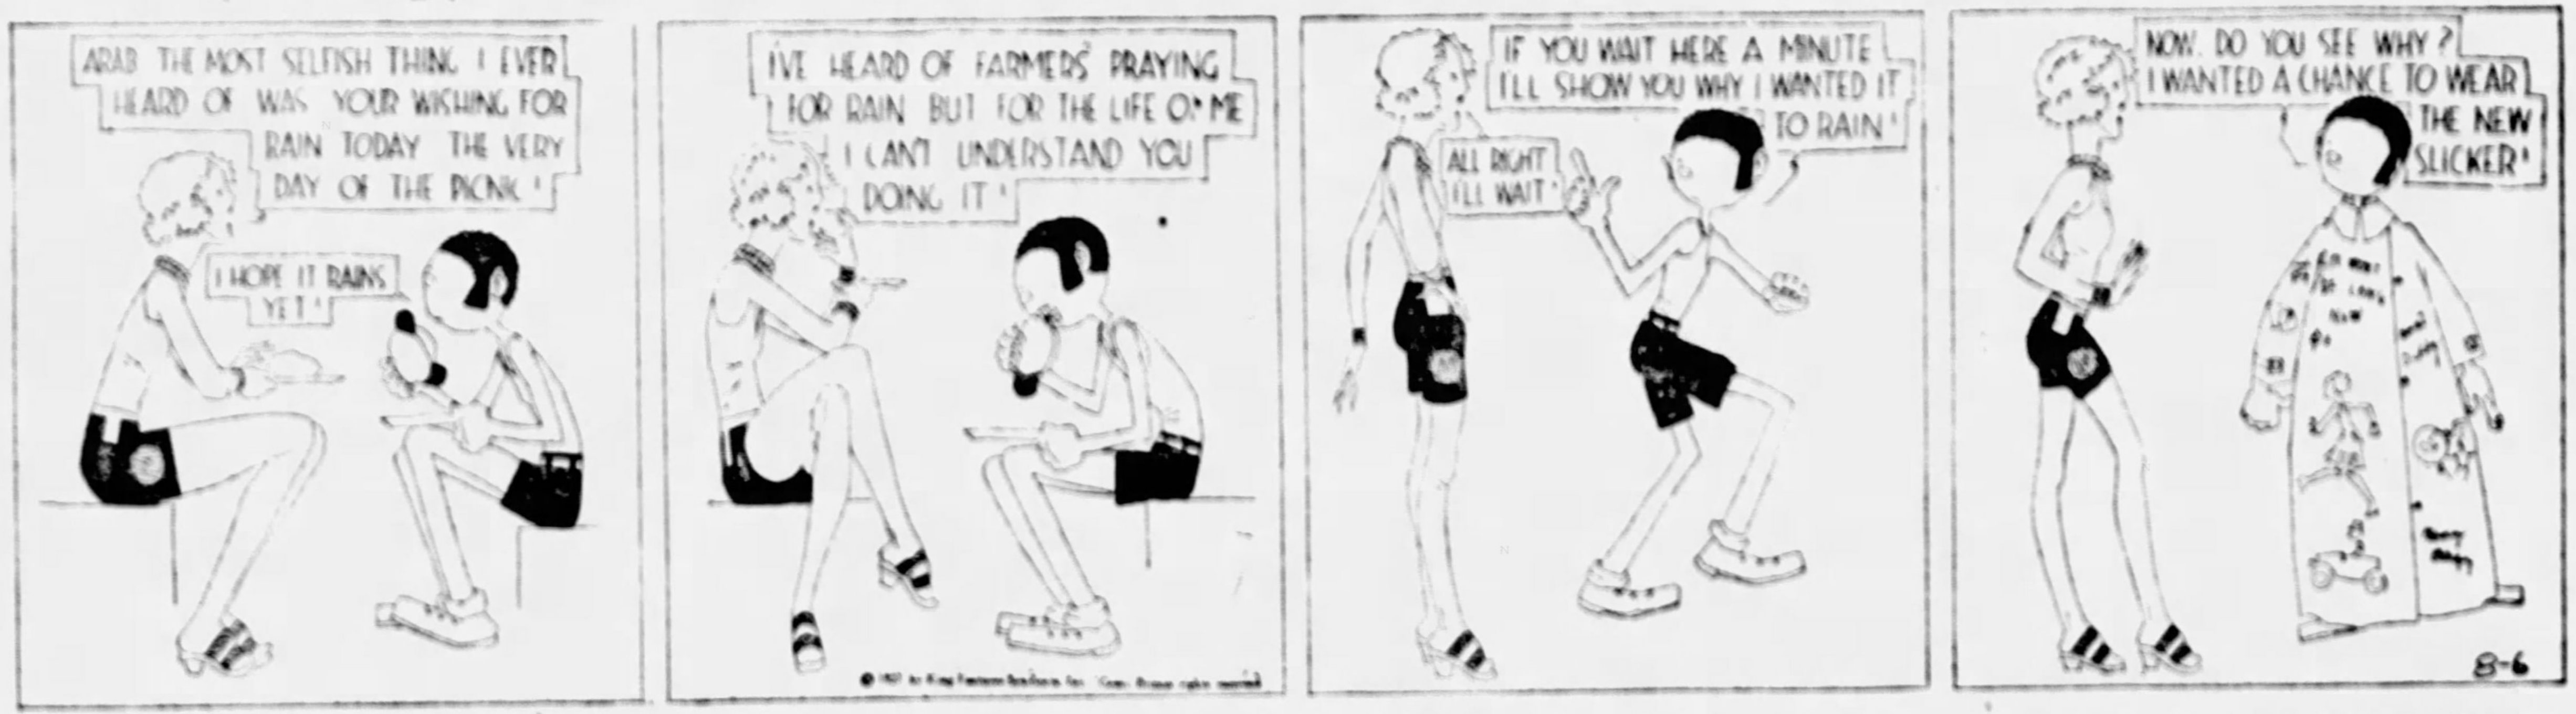
Merely Margy, An Awfully Sweet Girl

Story by Lloyd Mayer

By John Held, Jr.



ARAB THE MOST SELFISH THING I EVER HEARD OF WAS YOUR WISHING FOR RAIN TODAY THE VERY DAY OF THE PICNIC!
I HOPE IT RAINS YET!
I'VE HEARD OF FARMERS' PRAYING FOR RAIN BUT FOR THE LIFE OF ME I CAN'T UNDERSTAND YOU DOING IT!
IF YOU WAIT HERE A MINUTE I'LL SHOW YOU WHY I WANTED IT TO RAIN!
ALL RIGHT I'LL WAIT
NOW. DO YOU SEE WHY? I WANTED A CHANCE TO WEAR THE NEW SLICKER!

"Well, my dear, I'm on the VERGE of colLAPSE at this point—I mean, I ACtually AM, because you have honestly never SEEN anything to EQual this luGUBrious beach PICnic! I mean, they had hot DOGS and poTAto races—can you BEAR it? I simply LOATHE hot DOGS and I think these athaLETic contests at PICnics are SIMply FOUL, because you have practicably no SCONer sat DOWN and got COMfortable somewheres, when some odd soul sort of apPROACHes you and asks you to please go into the poTAto race, or something and you have to become VIolently athaLETic and all, or they think you are a flat TIRE, do you know what I mean? Well, ANYways, my dear, I must tell you something simply SCREAMing because, I mean, you reMEMber how I told you I could not underSTAND why that perVERted ARab wanted it to RAIN for the picNIC? WELL, my dear, he sort of conFIded to me the REason, which was that he had acQUIRED a new SLICKer, so he wanted it to RAIN so he could sort of apPEAR in it and imPRESS everybody—can you BEAR it? HONestly, my dear, I think it's the WILDest idea I've ever KNOWN—I mean, I ACtually DO!"

Salmon Mold.

Boil a two-pound chunk of green salmon. When done remove skin, bones and flake coarsely. Make a good tartar sauce and add to it, say about three-quarters of a cupful of the sauce, a large grated onion, a finely minced red sweet pepper, a tablespoon of minced capers and the same of sliced stuffed olives. Slice a cold boiled egg thinly. Arrange the flaked fish in a wet mold, spreading the paste between the flakes, and the sliced egg between the layers. Take a package of lemon juice and pour over it the pint of boiling water. Stir until clear, cool, then strain over the fish to fill mold and set to chill. Unmold on a plate covered with crisp lettuce leaves, garnish with fresh lemon skins filled with mayonnaise with a caper in the center of each, and a few sprays of parsley. Serve pulled bread with the fish.

Cannelons.

Make some very short flaky pastry and roll out rather thin. Cut it in strips about 14 inches long by one wide. Grease and flour a few short sticks and wrap the paste around them, then brush over with egg. Lay in greased baking pan and bake until the paste is a delicate brown flake in a medium oven. When cold, fill with flavored whipped cream that has been chilled, or with fruit jelly.

Building and Flying Model Airplanes

MAKING THE FRAME

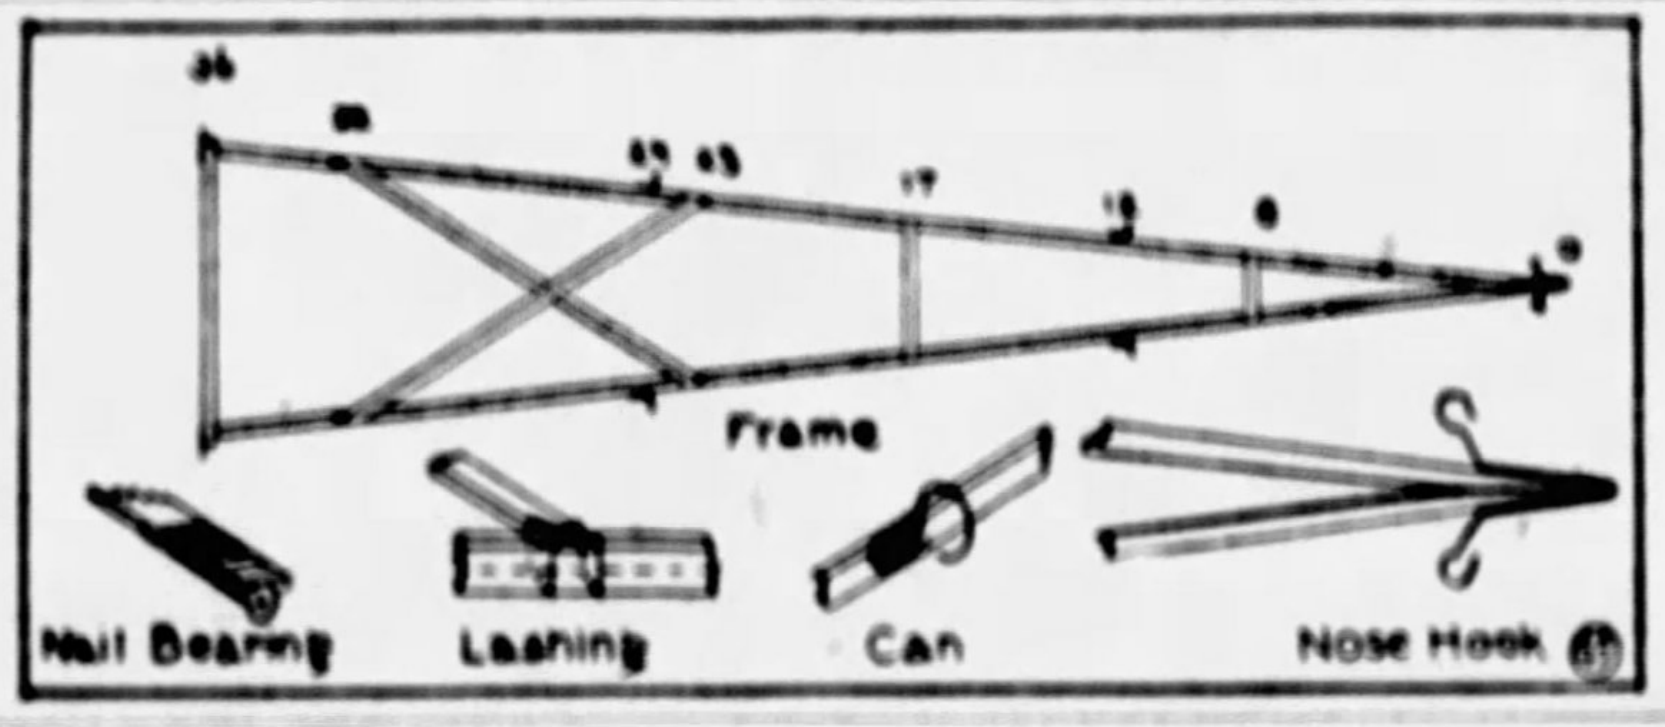
By PAUL EDWARD GARBER,
Aeronautic Expert, Smithsonian Institution.

When model airplanes were first made by boys, shortly after the first flight by man, made by the Wright brothers in 1903, the models resembled full-sized machines, and like their originals were heavy and fled but short distances. Most of the models were flown indoors at first. Outside the slightest wind would unbalance them. As the large machines were improved the models became more stable and capable of longer flights. Gradually outdoor flights became common, and soon large fields were needed to accommodate the longer trips. Gradually two kinds of model airplanes developed, one class known as scale models being copies of the large machines, and the other class known as scientific models which consisted of the bare essentials for flight, namely a frame, propellors and wings. The scientific models are easiest to build and make the longest flights. Whereas the first model airplane flew but 50 or 60 feet, the record today is over a mile, with a duration of more than 10 minutes.

SIMPLEST TYPE

In these first articles the writer will describe the construction of a scientific model made in the easiest manner from the simplest materials. Although elementary in design and construction, it nevertheless embodies correct principles, and if made correctly, of light materials, it should fly at least 500 feet and remain in the air half a minute.

Nowadays, for purposes of identification, the Department of Commerce requires individual markings on aircraft, similar to automobile licenses. For instance, Lindbergh's famous Spirit of St. Louis is identified by the symbol "N-X-211." We, too, will follow this custom and call this first model the "S-S-1." After you have built your model you may want to give it your own symbol.



SKETCH FOR FRAME

The first part of the "S-S-1" which we will make will be the frame, which supports the wings and power plant. The corresponding part on man-carrying planes is called the "fuselage." For this we will require the following material:

Two pine sticks, 36x¼x⅛ in.
One pine stick 36x⅛x1-16 in.
Ten inches of small strong wire.
One hatpin.
Two small nails.
Glue and thread.

The two large sticks are to be made smooth with sandpaper, and then cut at one end in a long wedge, as shown in the detail drawing. This wedge must be such that the open ends of the "V" formed will be seven inches apart. When this wedge has been cut glue is put on the inside faces of the wedge and the pieces stuck together.

Ordinary glue will do, but a product named Ambroid is better for our purpose. It is stronger, dries quicker and is waterproof. Most hardware stores and sporting goods stores carry it. After joining the wedge the nose hook shown in the drawing should be made of small stiff wire, and placed over the point of the frame, after which it is bound on, thus strengthening this joint.

PROPELLOR BEARINGS

The other end of the frame next occupies our attention. It is the place for the propellors, so we will make the bearings for them. Take the two nails, flatten one end and hammer the rest to produce a slightly flattened side. In the flattened end of each drill a hole large enough for the hatpin to pass through. These holes can be drilled with a hand drill. If you do not have such a tool the nearest garage will drill them for you. Tell them to use a No. 52 drill, or a 1-16-inch drill. This size is correct for most hatpins. When completed bind these bearings to the ends of a piece of the ¼-inch wood, 7⅝ inches long as shown in the detail drawing. Lash the brace to the open ends of the frame as shown.

Another detail drawing shows how to make a strong lashing. Pass the thread in the direction shown by the lines, make several turns, then tie. Use Ambroid in this joint and spread a little over the thread when finished. Next form an "X" brace out of two pieces of the ⅛" wood and lash it in place. The other braces are next put in. At the top of the drawing several numbers are shown. These represent numbers of inches away from the point of the model. If you will lay a yardstick or other ruler along the frame, with the beginning at the point, you can put a mark on the frame where each of the numbers are and thus mark out the correct places for all of the parts. Do this on each side and you will get your braces true. In lashing on these parts make your work strong and neat. Do not have heavy, coarse joints. When the Ambroid has dried cut away protruding parts of the braces which extend beyond the sides.

In the detail drawings a wire fitting is shown called a "can." These little fittings are very useful on models, for they distribute the pull of the rubbers and keep the frame from getting bowed. They serve the same purpose as do the agate rings on fishing rods. Four cans are made from wire to the shape shown, and they are lashed to the sides at points 12 and 24. Finally hold the frame up and sight with the eye from the nose hook to the nail bearings. Make sure that the sides are true and that the cans line up with the hook and bearing holes. This completes the frame. Hang it up where it will not get damaged or distorted. Watch for the article in tomorrow's Sun-Telegraph.

Midgets.

Cream one cupful of butter with one and half cupfuls of sugar, then blend in three beaten eggs, a cupful of seeded and chopped raisins, a tablespoonful of chopped citron, a level tablespoonful each of cinnamon, allspice, and cloves. Add sufficient flour to be able to roll the mixture on a lightly floured board. Roll a quarter-inch thick, cut in crescents and bake a delicate brown. Frost with coffee frosting and cover with finely chopped pistachio nuts.

For the Lovelorn

By ELEANOR GALE

Contentment.

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am writing my story and sincerely trust that some one will get the full benefit of it. I am now 21 years of age, and considered extremely good looking. When I was about 18 I really thought it was smart to get a fellow to propose, be engaged to him for a few weeks and then drop him flat. I did that about eight times in less than two years. But I was paid back for it all. When I was 19 I met a fellow and fell in love with him. We went together for a year and were engaged. Just as I deserved, he threw me down and [illegible] four dates to [illegible]. How I suffered. I cried for three days. Just from my own experience I have learned a lot. When we seek to win affection, simply for our own amusement, we are really committing a great sin for which there is no adequate punishment. We are here on this earth to promote happiness, not to cause misery. Love is of God; how dare we trifle with it? Love is heaven upon earth. Life without love would be worse than death; as the world without the sun. How many of the young men of today court without a thought of marriage? If they do suggest it, it is only to have something to talk of. Then they pride themselves on their conquest over the female heart; triumphing in having fooled them so nicely. And we girls are blind to our own rights and interests. When a man courts a girl, ruins her and leaves her broken hearted, so that she is more easily ruined by others, he thus prepares the way for her complete downfall. Her heart is different and she is ready for anything. Love wields a magic, absolute and tyrannical power over both the body and mind. Our cemeteries receive within the cold shadows of the grave thousands of victims that die from the result of a "broken heart." Love troubles cause more disorders of the heart than anything else combined. Dogs, birds and even horses, when separated from their mates, have pined away and died; so it is not strange that the human being with higher ideas of affection should suffer from love when suddenly disrupted. Disappointment in love is more intense than meeting death itself. Now, let me say something to those that consider themselves "heart broken." Cheer up, don't let the sun, moon and stars rise and set on your loved one. Congratulate yourself that you are rid of the "trifler." Seek society, come into contact with the opposite sex. Your former lover's magnetism will remain until displaced by another's. When you are alone you will only sit and brood over your "spilt milk." So don't you see if you get into society, go to dances and other social gatherings and throw your whole soul into some other enterprise, you will have less time to pity yourself! Try your knack at fascinating another, but be honest, command respect and make yourself attractive. Idle hands are Satan's workshop. It is imperative to find something to do. As love was the cause of your suffering, love again will restore you and you will love better and more consistently. Take all this from one who knows. Affection deadens self control and no doubt many suffering from love-sickness are totally helpless; they are beside themselves, irrational and wild. If they cannot subdue this feeling they will perish. Painful love feelings strike right to the heart, and the breaking up of a love leaves the victim in that morbid mental condition which no life tonics can restore. Anyone who reads this—man or woman—and is in the practice of "heart-breaking," stop it. Your day will come, but your suffering will be more intense and deeper than your victims. Some of the readers may refuse to believe this and consider this all "bunk," but I may further add that after I found myself a "victim" for two solid weeks I stayed in my room and refused to see anyone. During my morbid state I found an old book in the attic. It contained lectures on many subjects. Most of this letter is written from the knowledge I gained from that book. I remember now, I cried aloud when I read most of it. I decided to follow the instructions, and accordingly went out and had dates almost every night in the week. Now, I am going with a fellow and I love him with all my heart and soul. We intend to get married soon. Now, I really wonder if I ever did love the other fellow that caused me so much misery. I don't believe I loved him, it can't be possible. Let us call it "puppy love" and be done with it. Forgive me, Miss Gale, I have written too long of a letter, and may I write again? Trusting that I shall see this in print very soon, I remain

CONTENTMENT.

You are quite right in advising those who are breaking their hearts over a hopeless love affair to find other interests. It is the shortest way to forgetfulness.

Bess.

DEAR MISS GALE:

You have helped me out before, so I am coming to you for some advice. Mother admits I am old enough to like boys and have a little bit of fun, but still I never have it. I like a fellow. I will not say I love him, because I do not think I am old enough to know my own mind yet. I was invited to go to a theater party, but of course I was not allowed to go. The next time I will lie and say I am going with some girls and am going to meet the rest of the party (of course there are boys). I can't stand being penned up much longer. I went to a picnic and was told not to go with any boys. My father knew this boy's father and mother before he was born and yet I'm not allowed to go with him. There is only three days' difference in our ages, I being his senior. Miss Gale, does three days make any difference? or should I find a boy my senior? I care very much for him. Miss Gale, don't think I would do anything mean towards my mother, because I love mother more than life itself. Miss Gale, if I do as I say I was going to do, it would be the first time I did anything my mother did not know about, because I tell her everything. Another thing, Miss Gale, I wish to know how I can get rid of a girl's companionship. She runs after the boys all of the time and is very loud and has a very black reputation. She goes out with the fastest fellows in the town and I don't want to get a bad reputation through her. I could insult her or snub her, but I know how it feels to be snubbed or insulted and I wouldn't insult her for a fortune. But here my reputation hangs on a very slim thread, please help me. Wishing you luck,

BESS.

You don't give your age, but I gather that you are in your early teens. Hadn't you better wait a little while longer for your parents' permission before descending to deceit? But I can't reconcile your statements that your mother says you are old enough to have a little fun, and yet does not permit you to go out. Three days' difference is nothing at all, my dear. I am sure this girl will stop trying to see you if you refuse to go out with her at all.

Daisies.

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a girl of 18 and have been keeping company with a young man 20 years of age. He is engaged to another girl who is in college. He seems to like me and the other girl too. Should I drop his company or not?

DAISIES.

If you feel that this young man is really fond of you there is no reason why you should drop him. But if you think that he is merely wasting time until his fiancee returns from college you should have too much pride to play second fiddle. I am against the theory of martyrdom. If you love this man and another girl loves him—each of you has a right to his friendship. It may be that he will learn that it is you, and not she, who will make him happy—and until his fiancee comes home you ought not to give him up. Every man for himself, and may the best man win.

PRESERVING BEAUTY

READING the lives of the women who have left their delicate fingerprints on the pages of time, we find that they were all more than mere beautiful women. They were women who KEPT their beauty.

Semiramis, Helen of Troy, Cleopatra, Madame de Pompadour, all began with mere youthful beauty, and wore that beauty like a garment until they had become so renowned for it that they have become beautiful pictures in memory. These super-women, who swayed politics and kings, never relaxed in the constant care of themselves. They held on to their charm by guarding their greatest asset, feminine loveliness, even to the end of their days.

So often young girls paint, powder, pick their brows and take all the care in the world before they marry, and then when they're married give up all their artifices and charm. It's after they marry that they begin to need the effort to be beautiful rather than while they are still young and fresh. When she is young, gadding about, dancing half the night, living so much outdoors, and the very exuberance of youth, ever bubbling and on the go, a girl will tend to keep the muscles hard and firm. But when she marries, and her new duties tie her to the house, she should substitute the "daily dozen" for the natural exercise that she has given up. A little care of the body and a little care of the face will go a long way toward helping to hold the man a woman has chosen to entrust her life to.

"The middle-age spread," that bugaboo of most women reaching maturity, should never be allowed to haunt the thoughtful woman. Surplus fat gathers quickly under muscles allowed to become flabby through disuse. Keep the body firm and taut by regular exercises, repeating the same ones each day as you discover new ones. Do not overwork the muscles one day and fail to use them again for several days running, and then give them a sudden dose of overwork to make up for time lost. This will never get you anywhere at all. You've merely tired yourself out so that you will not want to go through the exercises again the next day. Do just so much a day, and use regularity, increasing gently without feeling the effort, so that the care of your body becomes a pleasure to you instead of a bore. Above all, remember to start in time. Once the muscles have been allowed to sag, it is twice as hard to get them back to their normal elasticity as it is to keep them doing their duty from the start.

Time for Blueberry Muffins!

Have you been forgetting to give your family blueberry muffins? If so, reform! Use this recipe today! It's the famous recipe that calls for Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk. If you love perfect texture and crisp, golden crust, never make muffins with any other milk!

Blueberry Muffins
2 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 eggs
½ cup Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk
¾ cup water
4 tablespoons shortening
1 cup blueberries

Sift together the dry ingredients. To them add Condensed Milk, water and eggs, which have been thoroughly blended. Add melted shortening. Mix well and add blueberries. Half fill well greased muffin pans and bake in a moderate oven (375°) about twenty-five minutes. (Canned berries may be used if they are well drained.)

Keep Eagle Brand Milk always on hand for cooking. It is not just "plain milk" as many women seem to think. It is Sweetened Condensed Milk—a delicious blend of pure, fresh, full-cream country milk and finest sugar. Super-rich, because most of the water has been removed. And smooth with a creamy smoothness that no home blending can equal! That's why it gives extra richness and finer consistency to all kinds of desserts, salad dressings, cake icings, candies, etc.

And Eagle Brand Milk is wonderful for coffee, too! Just think—it creams and sugars—deliciously—at one-half the cost of separate cream and sugar! And it keeps fresh and pure and rich for days after the can is opened—even without ice! . . . Get Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk to-day from your grocer!

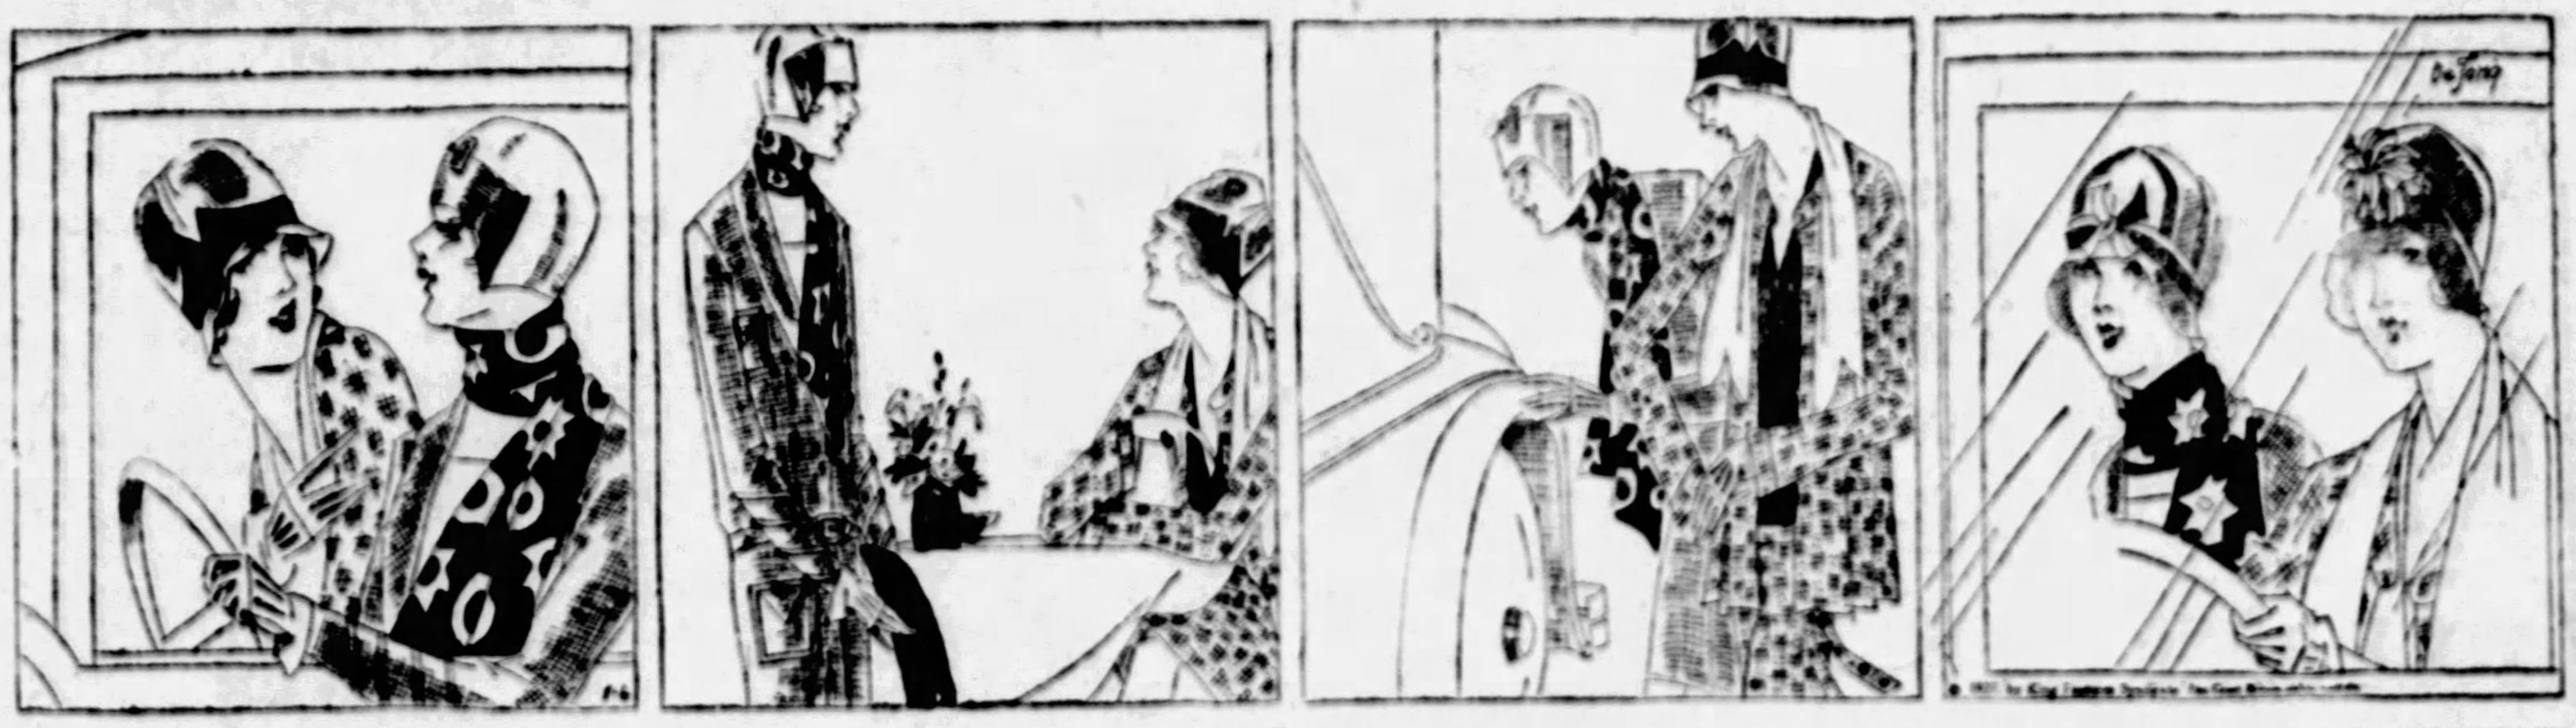
CHIC CHERIE

BACK TO THE FARM.

LATEST FASHIONS



Back to the farm! Back to the old oaken bucket and that sort of thing. If you think Cherie and Dina don't look as though any farm, much less an old one, were their destination, you can admire, in spite of that, the ballibuntl cloche and the felt and ribbon skull cap.

"There's a swimming hole beyond the eight-acre lot," says Cherie and Dina wonders whether their bathing suits will be appropriate. As appropriate, for instance, as Cherie's light homespun coat, with patch pockets and sleeve trimmings, is to motoring this Summer.

"Just about enough gas to get there," says Cherie and Dina hopes she won't take the wrong turn. Dina is travelling in a printed silk ensemble which has a dress with a waistcoat front giving the effect, with the jacket, of a tailored costume. The pleated coat is new.

"It's the road to the right beyond that tree," says Cherie, "and five miles beyond old man Mallard's to Four Corners. We'll stay in town tonight," and although it's raining it isn't raining, if you get what we mean, for the two ladies in the ribbon trimmed ballibuntl hats.

MY SON'S SWEETHEARTS

By Ida McGlone Gibson

"YES," hesitated Phil. "I think I like it. At least I would have liked it on any other girl, but, Natlee, I don't think I ever loved anything more in my life than I've loved your beautiful bands of golden hair. Why, I used to picture them lying in my dugout, and it fairly lighted that black hole. Don't you know I've been shell-shocked, child? I'm not used to having my ideas and ideals changed in an instant. You may have done something terrible to me. My heart is very weak, you know, since I was wounded."

"Any old time Natlee Jones will affect Wynne Tracy's heart," she said flippantly.

Phil wished he had courage to tell her she had affected it already. It was beating like a trip-hammer. He kept still, however. He wanted to see what she would say next—this new and surprising Natlee.

"I expect you're going to play around with us for a while, Wynne, now that you've made the world safe for democracy. I wouldn't think that would suit you very well, after all, because you're the only real aristocrat I've ever known."

"What about Jerry Kenyon, Natlee? He used to belong to the aristocracy before I went away; at least he could only see the richest girls in town."

Natlee blushed, and seeing it, Phil wondered if her father had been one that the war had made rich.

Before he could think much about it, Natlee had recovered herself and answered.

"Oh, Jerry's all right. Quite as right as a four-minute egg can be. I've threatened to crack his shell for him many a time, but he's managed to get from under it. You see, Jerry is one of those machine guns that are deadly only when someone pulls the trigger.

"Dad pulls it for Jerry nowadays, and the combination works fine; at least for Dad and Jerry, but it's deadly to be the innocent bystander."

"Are you the innocent bystander," were going to marry Jerry—that was the impression I got from your letter."

"Wynne Tracy, you are rare—positively priceless, standing there so straight and military, caressing that little French mustache while telling me that I insinuated, or even intimated, I was going to marry Jerry Kenyon or anyone else, by the way. I'm having too good a time living all by my lonely. I expect you don't know that Aunt Julia—God rest her soul—is dead. She left me all her money, and since I was 18 I have been living in my own house, which once was hers. You are before you the latest imitation of the 'new woman.' How do you like me?"

CHAPTER LIII.
WYNNE RESOLVES TO TRY AGAIN.

PHILLIP TRACY hesitated a moment, and then he repeated Natlee's question, "How do I like her?" She is so surprising that I must decline to answer—yet.

"So you are living all alone in Aunt Julia's house?"

"Not entirely alone," she answered, after a moment.

"I have a companion about 40 years old, and some servants. Dad's just hopping mad about it, but for once he can do nothing. I'm of age and it's my money and Mother and Jerry would not let him forbid me his house.

"Now, Wynne, don't you look as if you, too, did not approve. Yes, you're going to, but I hope you're pretending to be a Great Stone Face and that some day I'll get back under it and find the Wynne that Rod and I used to know."

For one moment Phillip thought he caught a glimpse of earnestness and sincerity in the lapis laguli eyes. He marched forward quickly, but Natlee eluded him. With a "Shall I sit here, Mrs. Tracy?" she passed to the other side of the table from where he was standing, and sat down.

Anne Tracy had said nothing all through this conversation, entirely made up of small talk. She was trying to discover if Natlee was acting or if she had really become this frothy, frivolous girl. She knew that some girls change in just this sort of way when they get from under the domineering restraint of their parents.

She could see that Phil was quite as much at sea as she was, and she sighed as Phillip asked rather wistfully, "Has everybody in America changed as much as you have, Natlee?"

"Of course they have, Wynne. The old girl herself has changed. America has stepped out since the war. Just at present she is doing a toe dance on the top of the world to jazz music. You'll have to join in the grand march. Mind your step or you'll get left on the side lines."

"I'm very tired of marching, Natlee, but it may be amusing when I get used to it."

"Oh, Wynne, I hope you'll get used to it soon. I don't want you to be like Jerry. He's been getting more and more like a cold bread pudding, with an unsuspected soul of whipped prunes since he's been with father. I'm getting so I hate these mollycoddles who haven't guts enough to talk up for themselves. (That's a word I learned from the boys who have come back from overseas. You ought to have heard it enough not to be shocked.)"

Phillip looked across the table and smiled. This child was somebody quite new, but she was interesting after all.

Natlee returned Phil's smile with enthusiasm, for he still had a way with women, although he thought he had lost it.

"I saw your friend, Mrs. Hilliard, the other day, Mrs. Tracy."

This was thunder from a clear sky.

Quicksands of Love

By ADELE GARRISON

A New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

FOR fully thirty seconds after Dicky's explosive speech there was absolute silence in the living room. My father's fine expressive face set into stern lines and I knew that he was both hurt and offended by Dicky's rudeness. As for myself, I was shaking with fury that my husband should speak in such fashion to my father, whose only offense had been a tender solicitude for his son-in-law's welfare, with a suggestion that he ought to consult a physician.

I scorned to dignify his rudeness by betraying that I had noticed it, yet I flamed with the desire to make him feel the same hurt which he had given my father, and I suddenly yielded to the temptation to say with an aggravating little drawl:

"I quite agree with you, Dicky. You do not need a doctor, only a little common sense in your eating and drinking."

My father sent a grieved, reproachful glance at me.

"Margaret!" he said in a tone such as I never had heard from his lips, but Dicky interrupted.

"She's absolutely right, Dad, only she ought to have added that I also need a few lessons in common decency and politeness. I'm awfully sorry I snapped you up that way. Will you accept my very heartfelt apology?"

Dicky is as royal in his repentance as he is quick to irritation. Although he must have had a real grievance against me, he included me in his expression of contrition.

"Sorry I stepped on Katie's toes, old dear," he said with an engaging smile. "I guess it was my own indigestion instead of bad cooking which spoiled the dinner for me. But I'll forgive you if you'll make me up some of that iced fruit punch you always fix for me at night. It's the only thing that listens good to me. I'm terribly thirsty."

My lips opened to tell him that he was drinking altogether too much of his favorite mixture of fruit juices which at his insistence I prepared and left in the refrigerator each night, and to which when he was ready for it, he added ginger ale. From this concoction he refreshed himself while reading in bed. It was my private opinion that his over-indulgence in this favorite beverage of his was largely responsible for his capricious appetite. But with the words of expostulation upon my lips I changed them to a pleasant "of course," and rose to go back to the kitchen, for I knew better than to suggest that Katie should make the beverage. It is one the proportions and mixture of which I had invented myself, and Dicky does not like any one else to prepare it for him.

"Make enough so Dad can have a swig, too," Dicky directed genially. "If you like it, Dad," he continued, turning to my father, "I'll let you share my nightly beverage."

The uneasiness which I felt at Dicky's own over-indulgence in the acid beverage, coupled with a knowledge of my father's constitution made my reply quick and sharp.

"Indeed you'll do nothing of the sort. Father never can take anything which has lemon juice in it. But, Father," turning to him, "I'll fix you up anything else you wish. A glass of iced orange juice, perhaps?"

He put up his hand with a protesting laugh.

"After that dinner? Indeed, no. You, yourself, will have to share his tippling."

I shook my head with a little laugh.

"I feel as you do," I said. "I could add neither meat nor drink to that dinner."

"Well! I'm game," Dicky said stubbornly, "even though I do hate to drink alone. Make up an extra lot, Madge. I don't believe I ever was so thirsty in my life."

MY NEIGHBOR SAYS:

TRY using a brick for an ironing stand and you will find that the irons will retain their heat much longer than when an ordinary stand is used.

Don't when roasting meat, keep the oven gas burning until it is time to serve the meat. For some time after the jets are out the temperature of the oven will remain high enough to keep the contents hot.

If food scorches you should remove the kettle from the stove and place it in another pan of hot water.

In order to beat the white of an egg to a stiff froth quickly, add a pinch of powdered sugar and fine salt and beat on a dinner plate with a broad pointed knife.

Rugs should not be shaken. Instead, hang them on a clothesline and beat them with a cane beater kept for the purpose.

When taking a pie from the oven, do not put it on flat surface of a table to cool, but on a high wire rack. The rack helps to keep the crust crisp.

To iron men's soft collars, begin at the points and press toward the center of the back. This will prevent the unsightly wrinkles that are usually seen on home-ironed collars.

When plates or dishes used for baking are burnt they can be easily cleaned by rubbing them with a cloth dipped in salt.

Japanese trays may be cleaned by rubbing with clear olive oil, applied with a flannel cloth.

FOR A GOOD COMPLEXION

IN a recent newspaper there was an article about an old man living in Europe who had the skin and coloring of a child, in spite of his great age. When asked about his secret of looking so young he announced that it was because he had used olive oil on his face every day of his life.

Oil is indeed a very excellent thing to soften and refresh the skin. Almond oil is the best of these. It makes a very soothing massage, and should be used if the skin is inclined to dryness. Never use any oil for a skin that is already shiny.

The best method of using almond oil is first to wash the face carefully in warm water, rubbing a good soap well into the skin. This will remove all dust from the pores that, if left to accumulate, would quickly become blackheads. Wash the soap off, using the same circular massage to remove all soap just as carefully as you rubbed it in. Do not fail to rinse the face thoroughly always after using soap. If you leave any trace of soap on your face it causes it to become dry and crackle—just ready to settle into wrinkles.

Having carefully removed all soap, apply the almond oil, pouring a little into the cupped palm of your hand, and rub briskly with the tips of the fingers, starting at the chin, and working up toward the eyes, always with the circular movement. After you have rubbed it in as well as you can, remove with a soft towel all the surplus oil, and harden the skin by a dash of cold water.

Italian Fritters.

Mix a tablespoonful of olive-oil with a cupful of warm water, add the beaten yolks of one egg, and enough flour with a teaspoonful of baking powder to make a soft smooth batter. Add a half saltspoonful of salt and set aside for an hour, then stir in the stiffly beaten white of the egg and fry by the spoonful in hot fat. Sprinkle a little powdered sugar over the fritters. Serve in a napkin.

Baked Apples.

Select large, tart apples. Wash and wipe dry. Remove centers with apple corer. Arrange in pan with very little water, filling centers with sugar. Dip syrup over them two or three times while baking. Serve warm with cream. These may be made more delicate by paring apples and baking them in earthen pudding dish, filling centers with sugar, chopped raisins and nuts, piece butter and little lemon juice.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Early risers probably will not benefit today, for according to astrology adverse influences are strong in the morning.

The planetary rule is favorable to serious thought and to mental receptiveness and should benefit the churches.

Widespread interest in religion and philosophy is foretold and a spiritual awakening is prophesied.

From now to the end of the year reactionary influences will be strong, the seers prophesy, and in the United States life is to be less hazardous in many ways than it has been in recent years.

The planetary forces probably will encourage introspection and a desire to organize personal affairs in a systematic manner.

This is an auspicious direction of the stars for men of positive nature, for they will be inspired to plan wisely for the future.

Governors and all who are entrusted with public business should benefit.

The aspects today appear to foreshadow for certain states successful campaign for the reduction of crime and the stimulation of high ideals.

This configuration is believed to cause civic consciousness and a desire to work for the general good. It is most favorable for appeals in behalf of charities or philanthropies.

Missionary work is to center in big cities where the inhabitants of the underworld will be helped wisely.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of gain through inheritance and success in high ambitions.

Children born on this day may be impulsive and difficult to guide, but they probably will be rarely lucky all through life.

Listening In on Eve

(Copyright, 1927, by The Associated Newspapers)

FELICIA," said Jack, solemnly, "we have to be out of this place by Friday night. Can you pack in a hurry?"

"Goodness, Jack, what's the matter? Why do we have to leave our home so suddenly?"

"Because, my dear child, I've a letter here from my father's cousin. He says he will be here early Saturday morning to pay a long anticipated visit. He wrote from Sandusky and he gave no address, so there's no way to head him off. The flat must be locked when he arrives."

"Why, Jack, I never knew you to be so inhospitable. Even if you aren't overfond of this cousin, I should think you could stand a little visit from him."

"I could endure a reasonably short siege, but, Felicia, when my charming cousin visits, he visits. If he should happen to be intrigued by your cooking or like the climate and amusements of our city, he would stay the year out at least, and he would be so pleasant and agreeable all the time that, no matter how fed up you were, you wouldn't be able even to hint that we needed the spare room for your mother at Christmas time."

"How does he have time to make such long stays? Doesn't he do anything, Jack?"

"He has never done anything to speak of. He has infinite leisure."

"And money?" asked Felicia, who could not help thinking of Nancy-girl's future.

"Nothing but a slender annuity, which will cease when he ceases. Don't get your hopes up, old girl. We can run out to that farm where we were last summer even if it is rather early in the season. It will do you and Nancy-girl good, and we'll be sure of escaping our proposed visitor."

"It does seem kind of means of us, Jack," sighed Felicia.

"Listen, my child, and you shall hear something of my cousin. He was married to my mother's sister, and if it hadn't been for mother and dad I don't know how they would ever have had enough to eat. He had a little money and he started a house soon after they were married, but the funds ran out soon and work on the dovecote stopped.

"Mother felt so sorry for her sister that father offered to finish the house for them. He told his cousin to keep account of the men's wages and the materials and turn the bills in to him. Imagine dad's surprise when Gay, that's what every one calls him, put in a bill for his own time. Father asked him about it, and he said that he had given up his job in order to supervise the carpenters, and he couldn't afford to work for nothing.

"My poor aunt didn't live long and when she died her wish to be buried in the old home town down east was respected, and of course father footed the bill. Naturally Gay didn't have the money for the trip, so dad financed Gay. He told him to keep account of all unexpected expenses and he would pay the deficit. Gay was gone six weeks. He visited New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Baltimore, and as you might say, all points east. He drew on dad ad lib., and when he got back without a cent in his jeans he explained that he thought that father would be glad to have him see the eastern cities, as he had never had a chance before.

"He was so lonesome that he closed up his house and stayed with us for two years. Father made him sell the house and a little other property he owned, and buy an annuity, and then dad and mother moved so that Gay could be painlessly dislodged. Mother told me afterward that she really missed Gay dreadfully—he had always been so pleasant round the house. But, Felicia, my dear, we don't want him being pleasant round our house for two years more."

"What a strange character, Jack. How do you account for him?"

"By jove, Felicia, I have a theory. I think he is the victim of his name. I have heard that names work a subtle influence on character and temperament, and how could you expect a man to forge ahead in the great world of work with such a cognomen as Gaylord Doolittle?"

Brewing Bonds at Best Price in Years

Saturday, August 6, 1927.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland, of which the Pittsburgh institution is a branch, has reduced its rediscount rate from 4 to 3½ per cent. Similar reductions have been made by the Federal reserve banks of New York, Boston, St. Louis and Kansas City. These movements furnish proof of the large quantities of money awaiting investment, which explains in some degree the strength of the stock markets, notwithstanding frequent reactions.

Pittsburgh Screw and Bolt began in Fourth Avenue at 45 and improved to 45¼. American Window Glass Machine, neglected for several weeks, sold at 37, an advance of 1½ points. Lone Star Gas began unchanged at 47. Devonian Oil was ¼ lower at 10.

Arkansas Natural Gas rose ¼ to 9½. Standard Sanitary rose 81 to 95.

Pittsburgh Brewing 6% bonds rose ⅝ to 99⅝, the highest price in over 14 years. Arkansas Gas improved to 9⅜. Lone Star Gas declined to 46½.

MARKET POOLS BRING NEW HIGHS

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—(AP.)—Pronounced reactionary tendencies developed in today's brief session of the stock market, although pools continued their efforts to mark up prices, and succeeded in lifting nearly a dozen issues to new record highs. The selling was not associated with anything in the day's news, but appears to have been inspired largely by the belief that the technical position of the market had been weakened by the recent sustained advance.

General Motors, Allied Chemical and some of the other recent industrial leaders were the hardest hit, although there were no wide open breaks. On the upside, buying was most effective in such specialties as Collins and Aikman and International Harvester, each of which sold at least 5 points above yesterday's final quotations.

United States Steel common was under pressure but some of the independents, particularly Republic and Inland, were strong spots. Public utilities also presented strong spots, Brooklyn Union Gas mounting to a new high and Brooklyn Edison climbing more than 3 points.

The closing was heavy, total sales approximated 1,000,000 shares.

EXCESS RESERVE IS LARGELY INCREASED

The New York weekly actual bank statement shows a large increase in the excess reserve and a moderate decline in the volume of loans. Changes of the several items as compared with a week ago follow:

	Last Week.	This Week.
Excess reserve	$ 4,118,220	$ 55,564,720
Aggregate reserve	638,545,000	677,450,000

Cash in vaults	58,415,000	48,307,000
Demand deposits	4,626,567,000	4,706,080,000
Time deposits	710,398,000	728,417,000

BANK STATEMENT

NEW YORK, Aug. 6—(AP.)—The actual condition of clearing house banks and trust companies at the close of the week shows excess reserve of $55,564,120. This is an increase in reserve of $51,445,900 compared with excess reserve of $4,118,220 at the end of the week before.
